State Nail-Picker Puts On Show On City Street Today

Powerful Magnets Strip Dirt Streets of Horse-Shoes, Cans, Nails

20 POUNDS TO MILE

J. Smith, Driver, Covers Hope-Fulton Section of No. 67

A remarkable demonstration of what a powerful electro-magnet will do in picking up nails, spikes and horse-shoes on public highways was given here this morning by the State Highway Department's automatic nail-picker.

Driven by E. J. Smith, this test machine which has visited every highway district in the state, put on a special demonstration at 9:30 o'clock this morning on the dirt section of South Walnut street near the armory. The demonstration was watched by R. B. Stanford, district highway engineer; Frank Witte, of the local highway office; Sidney Stanford, Major Stanford's brother who is visiting him from Honduras; and Alex. H. Washburn, of The Star.

Picks Up Everything
The machine, moving at a speed of about five miles an hour, tore up horse-shoes, heavy spikes, tin and wire, buried in the dirt street. It moved along Walnut to the tune of the steady clicking of metal hitting the heavy magnets and sticking there. Small boys ran excitedly back and forth throwing in spikes and cans, which the machine promptly "swallowed."

Mr. Smith traversed one block of Walnut street, covering both sides of the street, and cut the "juice" to unload. Cans were spread under each of the three magnets, and when the current was cut there were many pounds of metal that had been recovered from the street, eliminating so many punctures for motorists.

The nail-picker has been at work on the Hope-Fulton section of the old gravel highway No. 67. Monday and Tuesday it covered the 14 miles twice, on either side of the road, recovering an average of 20 pounds of metal to the mile. Part of the material it picked up is assembled on a sheet spread in a display window of Patterson's department store, Elm street. Scores of people looking in that window have been amazed to see spring-leaves, big bolts and spikes, that powerful magnets literally dug out of South Arkansas' gravel roads.

200-Pound Magnets
The nail-picker is a heavy truck with specially constructed cross-beams on which three electro-magnets are hung. The magnets weigh 200 pounds each, and develop an enormous "pull" from three to four feet away. They are hung within three inches of the surface of the highway, however, and each metal object one or two inches deep in the dust and gravel.

A 25-horsepower gasoline engine and direct current generator is set in the body of the truck, with switches controlling current to the magnets. The magnets can be turned on or off independently of each other, and when unloading time comes the driver cuts them off one by one, moving the same piece of canvas around to each magnet to catch its load of metal—which drops instantly when the current is cut.

Mr. Smith told The Star this morning that he picks up an average of about 75 pounds per magnet before unloading. His heaviest loads are gathered on old gravel roads where nails and spikes have been accumulating for several years.

This is the only machine of its kind in the state, and represents an experiment which is said to be successful. It is expected that as a result of the lessons learned on this machine the State Highway Department will order several improved nail-pickers as permanent equipment for Arkansas road men.

Religious Fanatic Runs Amuck and Murders 11

LAHORE, Ind., Aug. 6.—(UP)—A Hindu religious fanatic ran amuck Tuesday night in the South Punjab town of Hissar, killing all persons who admitted Mohammedanism. Eleven Mohammedans were slain and four others wounded in the communal disorders.

The Hindu, who called himself "Harphul Singh," the notorious sikh robber, appeared in the streets after several days of tension in the town due to religious antagonism. He ran through the Mohammedan butchers' quarters, shooting all Muslims who appeared before him. The communal feeling in the town was high Tuesday night, and authorities described the situation as serious.

Veteran Pilot to Dare Ocean Alone

Erroll Boyd, above, has announced he will take off alone from Roosevelt Field, Long Island, for London soon in a swift Bellanca monoplane. Captain Boyd was the first Canadian aviator to enter the World War and was pilot of the Columbia's non-stop flight from New York to Bermuda last June.

Pair Held to Grand Jury in Liquor Case

Trail Leading From Still to The Home Is Evidence

TEXARKANA, Aug. 6.—J. H. Price, about 50, and Alfred O'Neil, 26, were held to await the action of the grand jury under $2000 bond each on liquor charges Tuesday morning in connection with a raid by county officers on a still 12 miles southwest of Texarkana, Friday. Preliminary hearings were held before Peace Justice G. W. Ragland.

A trail leading from the still to Price's home, about a quarter of a mile distant, was the main line of testimony against the pair. The state based its case solely on circumstantial evidence and the defense offered no testimony.

One of the circumstantial links was that both men dipped snuff and officers found several empty snuff bottles around the still; another, that yellow corn was found in Price's kitchen and yellow corn was found in the man's.

Deputy Sheriff John McCall was the only witness. He said that he and Constable J. F. Akin found the still, of 200 gallon capacity, and nine barrels of mash. They followed the trail to Price's home and placed Price and O'Neil under arrest.

McCall said they found a quantity of fruit jars and jugs at the house and that the jugs were similar to one found at the still. He said they returned to the still by a different route and found a quart of liquor in a briar patch a short distance from the Price home.

Noted Speakers at Fayetteville Meet

Speeches and Demonstrations Take Up Time of Morning Session

FAYETTEVILLE, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Rural homes drew the attention of the speakers and visitors of the 12th annual Farmers' Week under auspices of the Extension Department of the University of Arkansas in session here at the meeting today.

Dr. Marietta Eichelberger of St. Louis, Mo., Red Cross official, spoke at the morning session on "Nutritional Problems of the Family," she said. "One of the biggest problems confronting the farm family was letting the housewives wife go barefooted."

W. C. Laster, editor of the Progressive Farmer of Birmingham, Alabama, spoke on "You are doing plenty of shooting; are you hitting the bulls' eye?"

July in Hope Set Heat Record for This State

O'Neal's Report to U. S. Weather Bureau Shows 26 Days Above 100, With 16 Consecutive Days Above That Figure, and All-Time Record of 115 Degrees July 29—Lowest for Month 94.

What is believed to be a heat record for all Arkansas was established here in the month of July, when Hope showed 26 days exceeding 100 degrees, and 16 consecutive days above that figure, according to the report of N. P. O'Neal, local federal weather observer, to the United States Department of Agriculture.

The mercury missed the 100-mark only five days, and was 98 or above on all but one day, July 1, when it registered 94. On the 2d it rose to 99, on the 3d it went to 100, staying there until July 10th, when it dropped to 99 again. It was back at 100 on the 11th, remaining above 100 until the 14th. On that day it dipped to 98; was 99 on the 15th, and from the 16th on until the close of the month maintained an unbroken record of 100 degrees or better.

On July 29 the mercury rose to 115, establishing the hottest day of the year in Arkansas. The "hottest day" was bracketed on either side by two days nearly as warm, the thermometer showing 110 degrees on both the 28th and 30th. The month closed out on the 31st with a temperature of 103.

A 90-day drought remained unrelieved throughout the month despite a slight precipitation on the 9th, when 32 rainfall was recorded on Mr. O'Neal's instruments. A trace was recorded again on the 14th, and on the 29th—the record-breaker of 115 degrees temperature, the air was cooled somewhat by .01 rainfall. None of these showers was general however, and they had little effect on crops.

Star To Go To Press on Thursday Morning
The Star will be published Thursday morning instead of Thursday afternoon following its annual custom of suspending publication on Watermelon Festival day.

Immediately after today's edition is off the press, work will begin on Thursday's paper, which will go to press about midnight tonight. City subscribers will receive Thursday's paper before breakfast.

All daily cartoons and features scheduled for Thursday afternoon will be carried Thursday morning, together with additional Festival news crowded out of today's edition. Festival pictures will be published Thursday morning, and the program will be repeated at that time.

The Star office will be open to visitors all day Thursday, but the press and linotypes will be "on vacation."

Wishing you all a merry Festival day, we are, yours truly,
HOPE STAR.

Large Crowd Hear Candidates Speak

County Judge and Prosecuting Attorney Aspirants Speak

A large crowd attended a political speaking in this city last night in which the candidates seeking the nomination for the office of county judge, and state senator spoke.

This meeting was scheduled on the night of July 29 when the county candidates for the other county offices spoke. Due to the late hour they finished it by county officers on the night of July 29.

The candidates who are on the county stump tour are speaking today at Piney Grove, seven miles east of Hope on the Emmet highway.

Increase In Poll Tax Receipts Is Shown For 1930

Hempstead County Has 3,588 Issued For The Year

INCREASED VOTING

Total Number Voting in State Primary Expected to Be 251,000

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—If the increased number of poll tax receipts called for by various county collectors is taken at its face value, some 60,000 persons will be enrolled among Arkansas voters at the Democratic primary August 12 who were not among the 225,895 who cast ballots in the primary of August, 1928.

A total of 409,600 poll tax receipts were mailed county collectors last year, and in some cases additional receipts have been asked for. State Auditor J. Oscar Humphrey has revealed.

Only ten counties have accounted for poll tax receipts thus far this year, which leaves the question of the number of potential voters unanswered. Assuming, however, that the same percentage of persons who paid poll taxes and voted two years ago also will vote in the coming primary, the total number of voters in 1930 will be approximately 251,000.

The total vote by counties cast for governor in 1928 follows:

Local Men Capture Festival Dance in Briant Building

Will Be On Display at the Hope Water & Light Plant Thursday

John Wendal Owen and R. H. Barr, local men, captured a huge alligator out of Red Lake Tuesday night. The large reptile measures about eight feet in length and weighs in the neighborhood of 200 pounds.

As proof of their capture the two men brought their catch home with them. It will be on display at the Hope Water & Light Plant Thursday, probably longer.

This is the second large alligator these two gentlemen have been successful in capturing within the past few days. One of almost the same size having been caught by them in old river a few days ago.

Riot Breaks Out Among Prisoners

Eighteen Of the Number Were Injured in the Squabble

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Eighteen prisoners were injured late Tuesday in a riot between whites and negroes which began when negro prisoners monopolized the baseball diamond on the recreation ground at Welfare Island in the East river.

The trouble began Monday when white prisoners went to the field and found negro prisoners using the diamond. Threats were exchanged at that time but guards were able to prevent violence.

Tuesday however, the negroes again got possession of the diamond and a general fight broke out in which about 200 prisoners took part. Pending the arrival of police emergency squads from Manhattan the fire department company on the island turned streams of water on the rioters in an effort to stop the fight.

When rioting continued despite the efforts of the firemen additional aid was asked from police headquarters and for emergency trucks with machine guns and tear gas bombs were rushed to the stairway at the middle of the Queensboro bridge, which leads down to the island. A police boat with additional police was also sent across the river to the island.

Shortly after the police reached the island the riot subsided and the prisoners were heeded back to their quarters. The emergency trucks then returned to Manhattan.

Floats and Bands Will Assemble at 1 P. M. Tomorrow

Line of March Announced For Fifth Annual Festival

CORONATION AT 2:30

Free Watermelon Feast on Fair Grounds at 3:30 Thursday

Eighteen bands are definitely assured for the 1930 float parade when the fifth annual Watermelon Festival gets under way Thursday.

This many are known to be making preparations to board excursion trains coming to Hope from Louisiana, Oklahoma, and the more distant points in Arkansas; or by automobile from titles close by. Probably 25 bands all told will march in the parade when actually formed Thursday.

The parade at 1 p. m. is the first formal program event, followed by the coronation of Queen Sara Louise Gentry at the fair grounds at 2:30; and the free watermelon festival at 3:30.

Robinson to Speak
Senator Joe T. Robinson, who is to arrive here Thursday morning will present the crown to Miss Gentry in the presence of last year's queen, Miss Geraldine Busby—and the senator will then make the annual festival address.

All details of the 1930 Festival have been completed, and the city and county are awaiting the first arrivals at daybreak Thursday.

Forty-five tons of watermelon have been on ice in refrigerator cars in the local railroad yards since Monday, and will be moved to the fair grounds early Thursday for the free public feast Thursday afternoon.

Planes from the 154th Observation Squadron at Little Rock will fly here with half a dozen well-known pilots, to put on an air circus above the city during the Festival program.

Four American Eagle planes are coming, and a similar number will represent the Command-air factory at Little Rock. Passengers will be carried up from the local landing field, one of the best in Arkansas.

County offices in the courthouse at Washington will be closed all day Thursday, and Hope banks and general stores will close at noon.

Line of March
Following is the line of parade and the arrangement of the bands and floats for Thursday, at p. m. sharp:

All entries must be at the designated location by twelve-thirty. The line of parade will be:

West on Second street to Walnut street; south on Walnut to Third street; west on Third street to Main street; north on Main street to Division; south on Division to Elm street; west on Elm street to Fifth street; south on Fifth to Washington street; west on Washington to Sixth street; west on Sixth to Springhill road; south on Springhill road to Park driveway.

First section: Grand Marshal; color bearers; Texarkana Drum and Bugle Corps. Festival official car No. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6.

Second section: Hope Boys Band, 1930 Queen's float, 1930 Maid's float, 1929 Queen and Maid's car.

Third section: Martin's Boys Band 1. City or Hope float, 2. American Legion and Auxiliary float, 3. Shiver Bros. Car.

Fourth section: Martin's Boys Band, 4. Civic Clubs float, 5. Webb's News Stand car, 6. Geo. W. Robinson float, 7. Hope Druggist's float, 8. Fair Store car, 9. Hope Lumber Co. float.

Sixth section: Martin's Boys Band, 10. Hope Banks float, 11. Elk's car, 12. Hope Star float.

Seventh section: Martin's boys, Band, 13. Montgomery Ward float, 14. J. C. Penney Co. car, 15. Grand Theatre float.

Eighth section: Martin's Boys Band, 16. State Highway float, 17. Hope Furniture Co. car, 18. Boy Scout float, 19. L. & A. float, 20. B. R. Hamm Motor Co. car, 21. South Arkansas Implement Co. float.

Any entry overlooked will be reported to N. W. Denty chairman of the float committee, please.

Timber Resource From Farm Forest

Most of Timber in State Owned By Farmers on Small Tracts

The fact that farm forests are, as a rule, fairly small in area tends to hide the fact that the farm forests of the country cover an area of approximately 180 million acres and that they are a most important source of supply for timber products and firewood in the United States. Last year one half of all the timber produced in the South was cut from farm woodlands. In Arkansas alone there are between 8 and 10 millions of acres of woodland owned by farmers.

The one item of fuel for the farm home represents an immense value. However, the Arkansas farmer has not realized the value of his farm forest as have the farmers of Europe and Scandinavia. It is to aid the farmer to realize his strength in this respect and his responsibility that the forestry section at Farmers' week at the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, August 5-8, will present G. H. Collingwood of the American Forest association to speak on "The Farmer and the Forest." Mr. Collingwood has spent his entire time for the last several years in dealing with the problems of the private owners of woodlands, and he has found that one of the greatest problems is to get the man who owns a small area of woodland to realize its value and the fact that if it is protected and managed with only a fraction of the care given to his fields, that it will produce steady dividends in wood and in money.

Suggestions For Late Field Crops

Cow Peas, Sorghum and German Millet Are Named as Good

The long drouth has cut feed production so severely that farmers are looking for emergency crops for extremely late planting, which may be relied upon to help meet the feed shortage.

The crops best adapted for this purpose are early cowpeas, amber sorghum, and German millet. These crops may be planted immediately after it rains, if rain comes by the end of the first week in August, and possibly a little later, states D. J. Burleson, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, Extension Service.

The earliest variety of cowpeas is New Era. If this variety is not available other slightly later varieties may be used, such as Whiporwill, Groit, and Brabham. Cowpeas may be sown broadcast on good land, using a heavy rate of seeding, since the plant will not likely make a big growth. It is best to use at least six pecks of seed per acre.

The earliest variety of sweet sorghum is Early Amber. This variety will make a quick growth, and on good land it will produce a fair growth even when planted late. Sorghum and cowpeas are well adapted to sowing as a mixture. When planted this way, the sorghum supports the cowpeas, and a better quality of feed is obtained.

German millet is one of the quickest growing feed crops, but the feed produced is of somewhat low quality. The quick growing crop requires good land because the growth is fast. About three pecks of seed should be sown broadcast.

Howard County Had A Big Rain Monday

NASHVILLE, Aug. 5.—Breaking a drouth which had lasted for seventy-three days, according to the figures of those who have kept a record here, a rain started falling in this section early Monday morning, and before it quit, enough moisture had been put in the ground to start fall gardens, truck patches, and feed crops. Indications were good for still further rain, and hopes are running high that the people of this section will be able yet to overcome the shortage of feed with their fall feed crops.

The rain fell over a wide area, although it is not known just what the extent of the rain was. Persons who left Little Rock at 2 o'clock Monday morning drove in rain all the way from Benton to Nashville. Reports from all directions from the city indicated that all of the Nashville territory at least had received a good wetting.

Talk of the prospects of gardens and feed crops took the place of political talk among most of the farmers as the parched ground was again moistened, and action in line with their talk is already started.

Hobo King Leaves Only Few Effects

Books and Trousers Comprise Personal Effects of Man

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 5.—(UPI)—When personal effects of James Eads How, "king of the hoboes" who leaves an estate valued at $500,000, were inspected here it was found the eccentric millionaire had left three books and a pair of trousers.

How maintained a legal residence at the Jefferson hotel here and he used it for legal transactions.

The books were "Capitalistic Morality," another "Osteopathic Gynecology," and the third "Prescription Writing and Formulary." How was a graduate physician, which accounts for his interest in medicine.

"He always paid his room rent in advance," said Mrs. E. C. Ogg, manager of the hotel. "He didn't talk very much, but he always had a ready smile. Everytime he saw my little boy he would give him something, an apple or nickel."

Before taking up his residence at the Jefferson he lived at the Auditorium hotel here where J. K. Hinds, manager, recalled that How lived at the hotel for three years and always occupied the cheapest room.

"He wasn't here very long at a time," the hotel keeper said, "and he always told me that whenever I saw a broke fellow to let him have his room."

Farmers Urged To Hold Livestock

Expect Market to Drop If People Continue to Sell Livestock

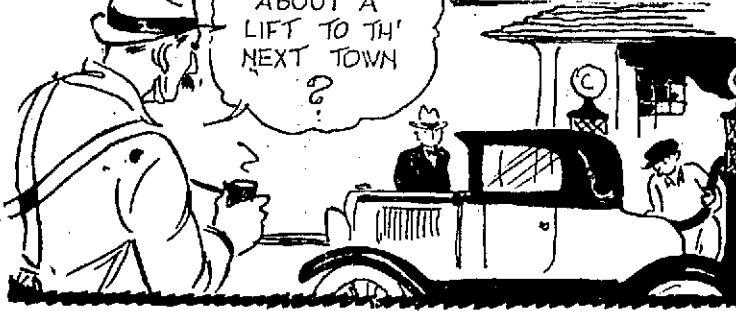

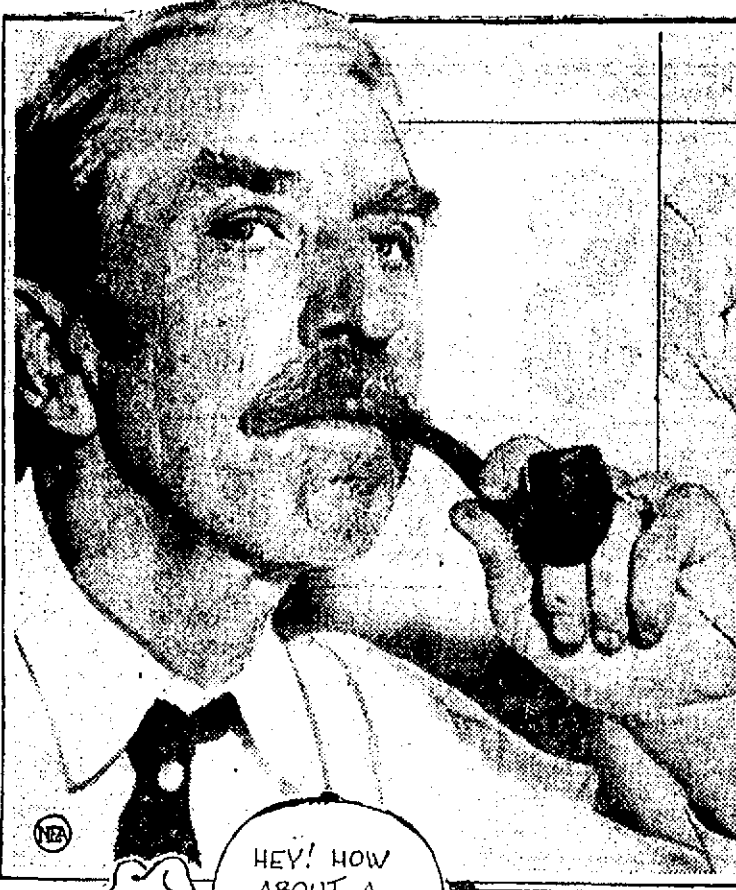

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., Aug. 5.—Appealing to farmers in this section to make every effort to keep all their livestock, W. H. Kittredge, manager of the Popular Bluff Livestock Shippers association said that due to the drouth most farmers are trying to unload their stock immediately.

"As the result of this action," he said, "the price has dropped to such an extent that it hardly pays the cost of freight. It is true that pastures have been damaged by the drouth, and that other food will be lacking this winter. Livestock, however, will not suffer to any great extent for a time, and it is possible that prices may rise."

The last shipment of stock brought prices far below the figure which he has been receiving, he said. He received as low as $2.25 for weaners, while only a few weeks ago such stock would bring $18.50.

"The market will be glutted for some time," he explained, "or until most of the forced-sale cattle have been disposed of on the market. Farmers will make money if they hold their stock as long as possible. Fall markets undoubtedly will be better than at present."

Serves Congressional District As Large As New England

If you think you have a good many troubles, just consider the case of Mayor R. E. Thomason, above, of El Paso, Texas, who has just won the Democratic nomination for Congress from the sixteenth Texas district, which is equivalent to election. He must please constituents in an area as large as the whole of New England, as the sixteenth Texas district comprises 38 counties with an area of more than 85,000 square miles and is the largest congressional district in the nation. The above maps show how the district compares in size with New England.

Straining his harp for a bolder tune?
Have you heard it call to the restless seas
Of islands sweet with the crested pine?
Or towering the myriad mysteries
Of secret caves where the spent tide whines?
And yet, whatever its song or its mood,
If it cruel, be, or if soothing sweet,
The great God made it and called it "good."
A part of his own great world complete,
Men know it by many, many a name:
The wind of Disaster, the wind of Fate,
The wind of Oblivion, wind of Fame,
The wind of Fortune, the wind of Life,
And still I say, that whatever it be,
Whatever its meaning, what its mood,
God tempers it ever to you and me,
The wind of Heaven that He called "good"—Selected.

guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Middlebrooks.
Circle No. 3 of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Willard Jones on East Third street with Mrs. Bert Keith as joint hostess. The meeting opened with a song, and the devotional was given by the circle leader, Mrs. John Woodul. Mrs. Earl White assisted by Mrs. W. P. Agee, Mrs. Chas. Burgess and Mrs. A. D. Middlebrooks presented a most interesting program. Miss Sue Ellen Jones gave a very delightful reading. After a short business period, the hostesses served brick ice cream with angel food cake to eight members and one visitor.

Big Bull Frog In Fight With A Dog

Comes Out of Pond to Take Stroll and the Fight Results

YORK, S. C., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Believe it or not, but bull frogs are belligerent. In the lake at the York water supply station are thousands of bull frogs.

Gay Parrott, express messenger, caught a big one and brought it to town on a string. On the main street, in front of a mercantile establishment, Parrott let the frog hop on the street.

Someone in the crowd had a terrier, and the frog showed plenty of fight after the dog growled at it. The bull frog suddenly grew to several times its normal size, according to Parrott, and was perfectly willing to fight the dog whose owner decided the frog was too unusual an "animal" for his dog to fight.

First Woman To Run For Office

School Teacher Enters Probate Judge Race For First Time

YORK, S. C., Aug. 6.—(UP)—For the first time in the history of York county, established in 1798, a woman is among candidates for the office of probate judge, from which an annual revenue of approximately $12,000 is derived because York is on the North Carolina border.

There is a marriage eugenics law in North Carolina but none in South Carolina. Annually more than 2,000 couples from that state hop over to York to be married. The probate judge of York county receives an average fee of $5 for each North Carolina couple married.

There are five candidates for the office. One of them is a woman school teacher, Mrs. J. Ace Shannon. "If you elect me probate judge, I'll examine closely into the lives of all these youthful candidates for matrimony," she tells the voters on every county stump. "And I won't marry a couple I don't think should be married. The fee I get for tying the knot won't influence me if I don't think the candidates are fit to marry and, in fact, competent in every way."

Twelve Killed In Indian Riots Tuesday

LONDON, Aug. 6.—(P)—Karachi dispatches to the Daily Herald report 12 persons were killed and 150 injured during an outbreak of communal rioting Tuesday evening at Sukkur, Northwestern India.

Police fired into a crowd of fighting Hindus and Moslems. Communal rioting broke out at Sukkur Monday. It is unknown how many of the casualties were due to the bullets of the police.

Two hundred were arrested. Two companies of Indian troops have been sent to Sukkur from Hyderabad, and the commissioner of the Sind district is on his way there.

Blonde Questioned In Dallas Holdup

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Police here were thoroughly grilling Tuesday a defiant blonde girl who was arrested as a suspect in the robbery last Sunday night of R. McCafferty and Miss Virginia Long. She is believed by detectives to have been the girl who sat calmly in a car as her two male companions robbed their victims.

Once before police brought the same girl from her expensive apartment to the city bastille, then to link her with one of the most sensational robberies that ever occurred in Dallas. In his first case the girl's sweetheart was slain, but detectives were unable to definitely connect her with the robbery, and subsequently released her.

Aid To The Communist

RODNEY DUTCHER points out from Washington that the net result, to date, of the outpourings of Hamilton Fish, Seymour Lowman and Matthew Woll about the "red menace" has been the encouragement and strengthening of the Communist agitators in this country; and his warning is worth taking note of.

As Dutcher remarks, the Communist movement in this country is neither numerous nor powerful. But Messrs. Fish, Lowman and Woll have said so much about it, have displayed such alarm and have called for such drastic measures to suppress it that the agitators have taken heart, redoubled their efforts and found new ammunition for their propaganda broadsides.

That is usually the result of going off half cocked. Those who get scared too easily often wind up by helping to create the thing of which they are afraid.

When you look at the matter dispassionately, it seems strange that anyone should get worried over Communism in this country. It is only necessary to contrast Russia and America to see how little basis there is for that kind of alarm.

Communism in Russia grew to flower because the average man in Russia lived under almost unspeakable conditions of poverty, want and oppression. Those conditions are the only soil in which Communism can grow. No man gets enthusiastic about the abolition of private property unless he not only has no private property himself but knows that he never can have any. That was the situation for the overwhelming majority of men in Czarist Russia; as a result they turned Communist almost inevitably.

But in America? Well, we have been having a business depression lately, and it hasn't been very pleasant; but we are several million miles removed from general misery and want. As long as we have anything like the prosperity of the past decade, it will simply be impossible for Communism in this country to become anything of a menace. Getting scared over it is nonsensical.

"Political Bunk"

THERE ARE too many hard and libelous statements being made during the heat of the present campaign for governor and other state offices. It should always be remembered that one of the candidates will occupy the highest office in the gift of the people of the state and as such is entitled to the respect of all the people.

If half the things that are being said about the different candidates were true, the whole bunk ought to be indicted by the grand jury. But they are not—just political "bunk." The time has come in Arkansas that the man who runs for office opens himself to a vicious attack upon both his public and private character and things are said and spread about him that haven't resemblance of truth.

The writer can remember, even during this short life that it was dangerous to call a man a thief either publicly or privately and that it was suicide to intimate that a public official would steal while in office. Now the modern idea is to charge them with everything from stealing the gold from the dome of the capitol to giving his first cousin a job in the statehouse. And the funny part of it is that they can bring forth evidence in the form of affidavits to prove it.

We hope the local county campaign does not degenerate into such a delirium.—Arkadelphia Siftings Herald.

It's A Complex World

NO NATION lives for itself alone in this modern world. Isolation is a thing of the past. Things that happen on one side of the world have their effect clear around on the other side.

The Indian boycott on British cloth, and the resultant depression in England's cotton mills, have hit Germany's cotton textile industry a severe blow.

The boycott, cutting down the British textile manufacturers' market, has given Europe a surplus of textiles and has caused prices to go down. So the Germans who have nothing whatever to do with the Anglo-Indian question, are suffering the effects of it just as the English are.

That is the way the nations are tied together in this century. Events that are seemingly entirely unrelated exert a profound effect on one another.

Forgetful Investors

APPARENTLY a great many of the people who bought Liberty bonds were inspired more by patriotism than by a desire to put their money in a sound investment.

At any rate, the Treasury Department announces that buyers of such bonds are losing about $1,000,000 a year in interest through failure to redeem bonds on which interest has ceased. More than $37,000,000 worth of federal securities which have ceased to bear interest are still in the hands of investors.

Most of them, probably, lie in various safety deposit boxes, half forgotten by their owners. If you happen to hold such bonds, it would be a good idea for you to redeem them and put your money where it can earn an income for you. It is startling to think that $37,000,000 is lying idle, simply because of carelessness.—El Dorado Evening Times.

A Hand Across the Sea

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
SEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—This has been a rough year on the senators from New England and the latest victim is the ablest and most picturesque of the lot, the Hon. George Higgins Moses of New Hampshire.

Senator Freddie Hale of Maine, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, is recovering from the defeat of his attempt to block the London treaty. Gould of Maine is retiring from public life, presumably on account of Anti-Saloon League emphy after it appeared that he was letting wine ferment in his cellar. Bingham of Connecticut was censured by the Senate because he let an agent of the Connecticut manufacturers in on secret tariff sessions.

Gillett of Massachusetts, whose state went Democratic in 1928, has retired from the Senate and is likely to be succeeded by a Democrat. Little is heard of Greene of Vermont, who was crippled by a stray bullet in a battle between bootleggers and cops several years ago, but Dale of Vermont got mixed up with the oil lobby in some way and had to make public explanations. Metcalfe of Rhode Island is faced with opposition this year that may prove fatal. Keyes of New Hampshire recently complained that cockroaches in the Senate office building were eating the binding off his books.

How He Loves to Play

Then there's George Higgins Moses, the wise-cracking, hard-boiled veteran politician who plays politics because he loves the intrigue of it and nearly always does things with his tongue in his cheek. George Higgins remembers a few years ago when New England was in the saddle down here.

George Higgins gets into more little jams than anyone else you can think of and he always seems to do it by design. Lately his troubles have been in connection with his chairmanship of the Republican senatorial campaign committee. He had them in the same connection last year when he named Otto Kahn as treasurer of the committee, causing enough trouble to embarrass Mr. Kahn to the point that Mr. Kahn quit. This time, however, the loud speakers of the so-called "Young Turks" in the Senate were trying to make George Higgins quit. They promised to make him quit, in fact, but George Higgins is still chairman.

Instead of being a rebuke to George Higgins, the plan whereby he will supervise Republican senatorial campaigns east of the Mississippi while Steiwer of Oregon takes over the western territory is said to be George Higgins' own idea. But the decision of party Treasurer J. R. Nutt not to turn the campaign fund over to George Higgins was more of a slap.

Just to recall that these troubles of George Higgins in campaigns aren't anything new, remember 1928. National Chairman Hubert Work and George Higgins had a feud all the way through. Once George Higgins left Hubert's office muttering "At last they've found a man who can stop Hoover," George Higgins became eastern campaign manager for Hoover and the Democrats found one of his letters to an editor praising as "hot stuff" a violent anti-Catholic circular, indicating, as before suggested, that George Higgins is a very practical politician.

That "Jackass" Epithet
A few months ago George Higgins called the Republican progressive senators "sons of the wild jackass" and in the subsequent commotion there were plenty of Republicans to moan bitterly that that was a heck of a way to talk for a senatorial campaign manager whose business was to re-elect Republican senators.

Ever since National Chairman Claudius Huxton had some of his interesting lobbying-financial deals revealed by the Senate Lobby Committee George Higgins and Claudius have been the only Republicans who thought Claudius shouldn't resign at the first convenient moment. George Higgins insisted that the party ought to defend Claudius and keep him at the helm, which attitude gained very few more friends for George Higgins.

So there are many Republicans who feel like saying to George Higgins: "Son of a wild jackass, yourself!"

Use Water Sparingly During Festival Day

Owing to the extraordinary demand made upon the city water works during Festival day, Hope householders are asked to be sparing of the water supply that day. The Hope Water & Light city has an ample water supply announced today that while the mere fact of a one-day crowd ranging from five to six times the city's population, is sufficient to cause a shortage unless great care is taken by local citizens, particularly in the sprinkling of lawns and dirt streets, which practice should be discontinued for that one day, the announcement said.

Hiking Craze Bad For The Railroads

Popular Passtime For All Classes Brings About Changes

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Walking a railroad out of business may sound like an impossibility but San Francisco hikers have done just that. For years a line known as the crookedest railroad in the world wound its way from Mill Valley up the slope to the summit of Mt. Tamalpais, one of the scenic spots of Marin county, across the bay from San Francisco.

The road ran through Muir woods, a beautiful stand of Redwood, and then doubled back and forth up the 2,601 feet to the peak of Tamalpais. Business was good.

Then a few hikers appeared and soon a climb to the summit became more popular than the train ride. Trails were built, hiking clubs were organized and finally this year the Tamalpais & Muir railroad ceased operations.

An automobile road aided the hikers, of course, in making the operation of a railroad unprofitable. It is a fact, however, that the railroad and auto road got along very well together for several years until the hiking craze started.

There are four trails to the peak of Tamalpais and every Sunday hundreds of hikers are trudging over them while the auto road at which tolls are collected, does not do a rushing business.

It is approximately 20 miles from the bay to the top of the mountain. Hikers from San Francisco take an electric train to Mill Valley and then hike the 10 miles, if the short route is selected, up the 2,601 feet.

Hundreds of the hikers go only to Muir woods, or to other favored retreats but lately it has become a sore badge of honor to make the climb all the way up.

No particular bias dominates in the hiking throngs as over the same trail, panting and sweating over the rocks will be found day laborers, shopchange of a penny. Figure it out.

Hulless Oats Raised

VAN WERT, Ohio, Aug. 6.—(UP)—Oats without hulls, believed to have been first introduced in Ohio by Joseph Hertel, who lives south of here, have aroused considerable interest among farmers in Van Wert county. An eight acre field of hulless oats, grown by Hertel, was planted late and ripened ahead of other varieties planted earlier.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

by William Braucher

Suarez Is Good News

WHEN the heavyweight champion of Afghanistan, or Liberia, or Iceland or any other far away place, migrates to these shores in search of ring riches and glory, it isn't news. But when a young kid who has been knocking off $20,000 purses in his home town and who is the biggest drawing card in his native land comes here to fight for almost nothing just to prove that he can fight—well, it's news, and pretty good news, too, Elmer.

That's how the young Argentine lightweight champ, Senior Justo Suarez, came into this country—just to show us he can fight and that he has plenty of money to spend.

Senior Justo justified his name of "Little Wild Bull of the Pampas" recently when he polished off Brooklyn's Joe Glick in the piece immediately following the simple execution of Sammy Mandell by Al Singer. To the persons assembled that night, he demonstrated a rippling, tearing style of fighting that lands blows wherever it is most convenient. And in there with a guy like Glick, who finds it a very simple matter to land a few punches in forbidden territory, the young South American also showed that he doesn't curl up, or even slow up, at being hit low.

That, of course, is contrary to the way foreign fighters should act. We have only to look back at Scott and Schmeling to realize that.

He Packs 'Em In

STAREZ'S racket made him so much money in South America that he recently got married so he could spend it. I shouldn't have to mention here that he selected the best way in the world to accomplish that end. However, he's young, ambitious and a drawing card and probably will obtain several nice purses in this country for the pretty little bride who accompanied him.

This miniature replica of Luis Angel Firpo has flattened 11 of his 20 professional opponents. As an amateur, he knocked out 52 in 72 fights. He was such a crowd-pleaser in Argentina that it was nothing

Texan Charged With Murdering Wife in Blast

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 6.—(AP)—A. D. Payne, Amarillo attorney, Tuesday night was arrested and placed in jail in connection with the investigation of his wife's death June 27, when a bomb demolished Payne's automobile. His nine-year-old son was maimed by the explosion. E. W. Thomsen, district attorney said he was preparing charges of murder for filing against Payne.

O'Brine Repeats Plan to Stay in Air Month

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brien Tuesday had less than 200 hours to go to better the world's record for fueling endurance flying set last month at Chicago

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

JOHN PESEK, the Nebraska Tiger Man, who claims he can't get guys like Sonnenberg, Louder and Shikat to wrestle him, would go into the fight game right now. If Al Haft, his manager, would let him. . . . The flame was kindled in Pesek after he had seen Carnier in a boxing exhibition. . . . "Listen, Al," Haft listened, "if that big fellow can make a million dollars in the fight game, I can make two million." . . . He's handy with the dukes, at that. . . . Pesek's like a lot of other fellows, though—fellows who predominate in one branch of sport. . . . Jack Dempsey pestered Jack Kearns with a crazy desire to take up wrestling. . . . Babe Ruth once wanted to become a boxer. . . . Willie Hoppe always wanted to be a ball player. . . . Denny Shute would become a wrestler if they'd create a heavyweight division and George Stinson always envied the husky football players.

for 50,000 persons to scramble into an arena on nights he showed there.

Would Fight Singer

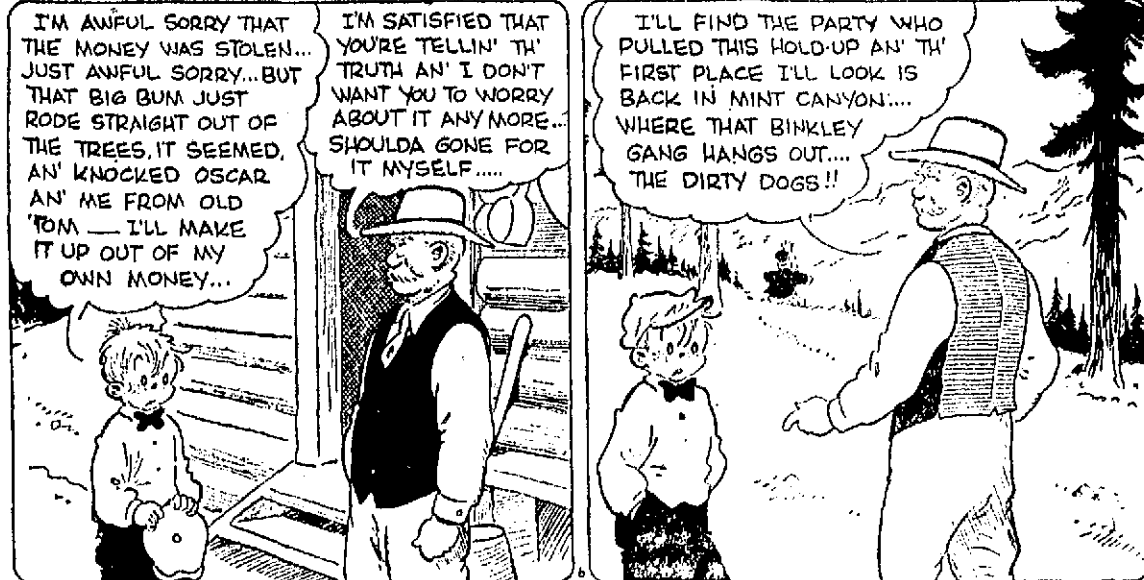

STAREZ had been in this country but a few days when a South American promoter wired an offer of $75,000 to the winner of the Mandell-Singer fight to meet Justo in Buenos Aires New Year's Day. The offer also stated that Singer (the won the fight, didn't he) could bring any referee approved by the New York Boxing Commission.

While Suarez may be lightweight champion of all South America, he might well polish up a bit on our style of fighting before he rushes in with Singer, Chocolate or Berg. Right now the Glicks, Flowers, Gracunas and a few others will keep his fighting edge keen and give him the experience he'll need in tackling the champion.

Hard Luck Story Wins Free Room For Car Owner

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Aug. 6.—(UP)—Panhandling stock was quoted at a new high when the market closed one night at Portsmouth Y. M. C. A. An unidentified "bull" trader hung over the desk, rears and perspiration coursing in streaming down his travel-stained face as he told a story of lost job, wife in the hospital for weeks; children crying for food; hopeless, fruitless search for honest work; hard-hearted world.

His heart melting with compassion, the secretary's sales resistance weakened. Hands across the counter—the well known backslap.

"Surely, brother; have a room and bath on us, and may God bless you!" said he.

"Thanks a lot," the stranger murmured in voice broken by unstilled sob. "And now," he concluded, "do you suppose you could furnish a garage for my car?"

More Sorrow For Queen Helene

King Constantine of Greece . . . once affectionately called Tino by his subjects . . . but later forced into exile, where he died, a king without a kingdom. . . . His daughter, Helene, is now also practically an exile from Rumania.

The little King Michael, her son . . . was all Queen Helene had left. . . . Now the new King Carol, his father, will have legal control of the boy . . . and Helene may have him only part of the time.

who was 16 at the time, and Catherine, who was only seven, went with the king to Lucerne in Switzerland.

Helene must have wondered if there would ever be a lull in the political turmoil which would bring her family together again. Her youngest brother, Prince Paul, then 19, had gone gaily off to Vienna, where it was said that he was forgetting royal scheming in a romantic idyll with a Viennese girl.

Princess Helene walked along the blue, blue lake of the Four Swiss Cantons. She had met a soldier who was tall and strong and handsome.

He was an officer in the Greek army. And she had decided that perhaps it didn't always have to be a prince who came riding for the princess in the fairy story. At least, if it did, she would not longer be a princess, she told herself.

Europe's most fickle king . . . Carol of Rumania . . . threw away a throne, then decided to get it back.

King of Greece, and daughter of Constantine, who succeeded his father. She lived in the palace at Athens, played with her sisters and brothers in the gardens, and wondered if a prince would come riding the way the fairy tale books said he should, some day.

A prince for a princess, the stories said! But the slender, charming daughter of the Holsteins decided that she wouldn't marry her prince unless she was in love with him. The years passed, each one a little faster. There was murmuring in the villages of Greece. The king held his sceptre a little tighter.

THEN on March 18, 1913, King George I, the grandfather of the tragic princess, was assassinated.

Helene's father, King Constantine, came to the throne, and his subjects mingled the shouts of his coronation with their prayers for his father. "The King is dead! Long live the King!"

Gradually the tones changed. The people were growing restless. There was mischief in the air. The Allied countries were whispering together. And Helene was growing up fast. When she was 21, at the marriageable age, no one had time to find her a husband. Her father was forced to abdicate January 11, 1917.

Meantime, Constantine's son, Alexander, Helene's favorite brother, came to the throne. Helene couldn't stay with him. Her father had been driven away from his own country, and he took his wife and daughters with him.

Queen Sophie, his wife, who was a sister of the former Kaiser of Germany, and his three daughters, Helene, Irene, and Magda Lupescu . . . daughter of a junk dealer, for whom Carol gave up a throne. . . . But he got the throne back, and seems likely to keep Mme. Lupescu, too.

Zizi Lambrino . . . bore Carol a son before ever he married Queen Helene.

Helene were married March 10, 1921. So Helene came to Bucharest with her unloved and unloving husband.

THEN more sorrows came. Constantine, who had returned to his former throne December 19, 1920, and held it until September 27, 1927, when he went into exile once more, died January 11, 1923.

George II, a lovable younger brother, was given a chance to see how long he could sit on the slippery throne of Greece. Helene's husband gave proof of his lingering fondness for Zizi Lambrino.

Carol defiantly told Helene he had married her "for state reasons" and love had nothing to do with the case. Queen Marie, Helene's royal mother-in-law, couldn't help in this instance.

"All queens are unhappily married," she comforted Helene, it was reported. "You must be willing to sacrifice your happiness for that of your son. I have gone through it. I feel sorry for you. But be patient, be brave. In time you will get used to it."

In 1923 Princess Helene sought a divorce. The Church refused it.

And about that time fate stepped in with another blow. George II hurried out of the palace gates December 18, 1923, at the request of the Grecian dictators, and didn't go back again. He had been held as a prisoner, his life in danger. On April 13, 1924, the blue and white flags of the Kingdom of Hellas danced in the breeze and bugles played around the Parthenon while Greece was proclaimed a republic. Meantime, Princess Helene's beloved grandmother, Queen Mother Olga, died.

Crown Prince Carol had been living almost like a prisoner in the palace. But he wanted to get away. A funeral gave him his chance. Queen Alexandra, his great-aunt, had died in London.

Carol volunteered to be the mourner. He fastened a formal band of black crepe around his arm and set forth. He didn't come back.

INSTEAD he met Madame Magda Lupescu in Paris right after the funeral. He stayed.

After a while he wrote a letter saying that he was fed up on royal life and wouldn't return unless he could bring along the red-headed woman he loved.

Princess Helene's husband had spurned her openly, in front of the whole world.

Then Crown Prince Carol gave up his rights to the throne in favor of Michael, January 4, 1926. King Ferdinand died, and Michael became king.

In 1928 Helene finally received her divorce. The unhappy princess did not want a husband who openly preferred Mme. Lupescu, the daughter of a junk dealer. People stared at Princess Helene with pitying eyes.

She knew that she was the unhappiest member of royalty, but she had Michael.

And now the final blow has fallen. The father of Michael, the former Crown Prince Carol, is back, and has been proclaimed the monarch.

"Long live the King! Long live King Carol!"

And the unhappiest princess in the land where kings are made and unmade, has to watch Rumania welcome back the husband who has brought her only sorrow.

Even that isn't so bad. But King Carol has the right to say what shall be done with Michael, although he never cared before.

Marie explained, "All queens are unhappily married."

Daughter of Grecian King Constantine, she saw her father and one brother dethroned, another brother killed by accident, and her grandfather assassinated . . . Then she was forced to marry Prince Carol of Rumania, whom she did not love . . . Finally, she had to choose between losing her son, Michael, or sitting on the throne beside his prodigal, profligate father

By HELEN WELSHIMER

BEING a princess and a queen brought only unhappiness to royal Helene of Rumania. Even the peasants who love to dress the daughters of their kings in glamour speak sorrowfully of her as "Helene the sad."

And Helene, unhappiest queen in the whole wide world, couldn't escape the chain of sorrows that grew steadily stronger. Death, disappointment and disloyalty have followed her every step of the way from the days when the coming unrest was foreseen in the assassin's bullet that killed her grandfather, George I, King of Greece to the day of the return of her husband King Carol II of Rumania, to the throne to which he had twice surrendered claim for the love of a woman.

Whether Carol was the monarch of Rumania didn't matter so much to Helene. She had never loved Carol anyway. It was her pride, not her heart, that he wounded. But her son, the former child-king Michael, came sliding down from the Rumanian throne straight into the arms of his father. As the son of the king, Michael is the property of the king. Helene, whose life had been wrapped up in the youthful ruler whom she could kiss when she pleased and spank when she pleased, had to let Carol make the decisions that pertain to the little boy. Helene is only his mother, and a queenly mother has little to say.

Helene, the sorrowful, didn't want King Carol to return. He came anyway. Bucharest, the Rumanian capital, became as softly, gaily radiant as a magic city. Flags flew, bands played, confetti frolicked through the air. Everyone in Rumania danced to the same lilting waltz. Everyone but Princess Helene.

A loyal peasantry sent its joyful tidings through the street. "The King is back! Long live the King! King Carol! King of the Rumanians!"

PRINCESS HELENE heard the cries. They were an old story to her. The substitution of names was the only difference in the pageantry of kings that has been her life.

She herself was trying to decide whether to sit on the throne with Carol or stay where she was in her private house in Bucharest. The Holy Synod of the Orthodox Church declared invalid her divorce decree of three years ago, which granted her a legal separation from her errant mate. About the same time the reinstated wife of King Carol II discovered that his majesty was far from breaking with his mistress, Mme. Magda Lupescu.

It was disclosed on high authority that money and letters had been sent by the king to his mistress by special courier and that a house in Bucharest had been prepared for her arrival.

So Helene, while the recent drama unfolded outside the castle walls and inside the castle's doors, sat by her window and remembered.

Princess Helene was the granddaughter of George I,

The Hollywood Story

by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Through a letter that he receives from a friend in New York, DAN RORIMER, Hollywood scenario writer and former New York newspaper man, meets ANNE WINTER, who has come from Tulsa, Okla., to try to act extra work in the movies.

Dan finds her charming and takes a deep interest in her. She learns from him that he works at Continental Pictures, and she gathers that he is not quite satisfied with conditions there. She has worked only one day as an extra herself, having been there but a short time, but a few days after their meeting she gets extra work at Grand United.

Her first day there she meets a girl named MONA MORRISON, and immediately likes her. Mona is living in an apartment with EVA HARLEY, and Anne lives alone, and Mona suggests that the three occupy a bungalow that she and Eva have seen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VIII

ANNE WINTER had moved and was now living with Mona Morrison and Eva Harley in the little furnished bungalow on the western fringe of Hollywood. It was a modest place of pale-green stucco, but it was cheerful and well-lighted and "homey"; and Dan Rorimer, contrasting it with Anne's former quarters, could well understand her enthusiasm for the change.

"A place to live in," Anne said, "rather than mere storage for one's body and one's belongings." And she had added: "Even if it is too close to the tracks to be fashionable, it's a home at least; which is more than I could say for one room and a kitchenette."

Mona won Rorimer's liking instantly. She was as vivid as her flaming hair, which was curly and bobbed, and she didn't look a day over 19, and she was slightly tough in a pleasant, boyish way that he found altogether delightful. She was considerably shorter than Anne, and more rounded, and Dan suspected that Mona might occasionally have to pay careful attention to her diet. He discovered before he had known her more than a few minutes that she was quite a tease and that she seemed to take keen delight in plaguing her friends and receiving their banter in return.

Eva Harley he liked, too, but with reservations. She had been neither cordial nor unfriendly in her greeting, but after a brief smile and a murmured commonplace or two had quietly withdrawn from the conversation, and Dan sensed a guarded aura about her that left him a little ill at ease in her presence.

She was a striking looking person, though—tall and slender, and lithe of figure, and languorous of motion—and crowned almost spectacularly with abundant pale-gold hair. Gorgeous looking, Rorimer thought, at the same time remarking that her mouth was just a little too wide and thin of lip to be beautiful; her cheek bones a trifle high, and marring the oval contour of her face. And he judged that she was older than the other two girls.

Anne had said, "Eva's just a little uncommunicative and mysterious, but I like her—she minds her own business, and that's saying a great deal."

"It is," Dan agreed, "for a girl."

"Well, you needn't be uncomplimentary," she said with a grimace, and Dan grinned. "Where is she from?" he asked. "Somewhere down south, with that drawl. You can't fool a Tennessean."

"Eva comes from New Orleans," Anne informed him. "Mona says she has been in Hollywood almost three years."

"Doing extra work?"

He found the girls busy with some new pale-green curtains which Anne had that day bought for the kitchen.

ANNE hesitated a little. "Eva hasn't been very busy," she said. "Mona tells me she sometimes models clothes in one of the Los Angeles department stores. She has a beautiful figure."

Rorimer thought: "Yes, but there's something just a little wrong about her. She's—she's hard to figure." And he had the strange thought that Eva Harley ought to have a foreign name and speak broken English, and this, somehow, would make her less difficult of explanation.

He thought: "There's something about her voice; something—disappointing." It ought to be, he felt, low and vibrant, like a low-strung guitar; and it was unexpectedly high and wrongly keyed, and in disharmony with her personality.

Dan had gone over to the bungalow one evening to call on Anne. It was shortly after their removal, and he found the girls busy with some new pale-green curtains which Anne had that day bought for the kitchen. And it was that evening that he asked Anne about Eva; but first he had been put to work hanging curtains.

It was Mona who opened the door for him, and she said, "Anne, it's the boy friend from New York." She said, "Come in, and wipe off your feet and take off your hat; the butler is off duty this evening. . . . My goodness, you're all shaved up this evening, aren't you?"

Rorimer said, "Pipe down, nut-sane!" and followed her in. "Good evening, Miss Harley," he said to Eva, and held out his hand; and the girl smiled as she took it and said, "Good evening, Mr. Rorimer," Rorimer felt a swift elation; at the same time, though, he was aware that he was struggling with a vague sense of uneasiness, and with a question on his lips he hesitated.

But Mona informed him in a thrilled undertone: "Garry Sloan noticed her today; he picked her out of the crowd and talked with her. And Anne's so excited she doesn't know whether it's Thursday or Sunday. Gosh, I don't blame her! Imagine what Sloan could do. . . ."

Anne and Eva came in then, and Mona said nothing more about Sloan; but the matter sat on Dan's mind, and it remained there beneath the light banter he and Mona exchanged while he hung the curtains.

Later on he suggested to Anne that they go to a movie, and he named a picture that Anne had said she wished she might see; but she pleaded tiredness and an eight o'clock call at the studio, and Dan, remarking her preoccupation and feeling curiously unwanted, said that perhaps he had better run along.

But Anne looked up quickly at his tone, and her eyes reproved him. "You're a dear, Dan," she said. "Please don't mind if I don't feel like doing anything, will you?"

Dan felt a little cheap. He thought: "After all, she came out to Hollywood to get into pictures; not to go running around at night with anybody who comes along." He thought: "What a big clump I am to complain because she insists on getting sufficient sleep before a hard day's work!"

So he remained a while, and Mona suggested cheerfully that they have sandwiches and coffee, and went out to the kitchen. Eva rose with a faint smile and said, "You'd better let me help you, Mona," and followed her out.

Anne turned to Rorimer with a little laugh. "Mona," she explained, "is almost useless in a kitchen. She cuts the bread too thick for sandwiches, and she doesn't know the first thing about making coffee."

Eva, she said, was different. "She's very capable."

DAN said, "Looking at Eva, you'd hardly think she was domestically inclined"; and he expressed some curiosity about her, and for some minutes he and Anne talked in low tones about the two girls whom they could hear moving about the kitchen.

"They're dears—both of them," Anne said after a short silence. "But a strange pair to be such good friends," Dan remarked.

Anne agreed. "Perhaps that's why they get along so well—they're so utterly different. Mona's so blithe and gay, and Eva. . . ."

She paused, and Dan said, "Eva gives one the impression that she hasn't found very much to be happy about. Do you suppose it's because she's disappointed in not doing well in the movies?"

"I think there may be something else, too," said Anne, and Dan felt that she didn't care to discuss the subject further.

"Mona tells me," he said presently, "that big things may be in store for you. Here's hoping, Anne."

At the same time, though, he knew a feeling of injustice that Garry Sloan could do so much for her without half trying, while he, who wished so greatly for her success, could do nothing.

As everyone who has ever baked a cake knows, the secret of a good cake lies as much in the skill with which it is made as it does in the choice of ingredients.

.. The Quality of Motor Oil Depends on the way it is made

Repeated tests have shown that motor oil manufactured from crudes produced in a given territory may differ widely in lubricating value. The fact that certain oils are made from certain crudes—by different manufacturers—does not mean that the oils are equally efficient. Because the secret of quality in motor oil is largely in the making—not in the crude alone.

Nothing is too good for a product which bears the "Standard" Name. A skilled technical organization selects—for the making of "Standard" Motor Oil—those crudes which tests show have certain definite properties. And, through scientific manufacture, in one of the world's greatest refineries, the wax, excess carbon and other impurities of the crude are removed, and the lubricating and heat-resisting qualities are combined and refined into a motor oil that meets every test.

"Standard" Motor Oil makes motors—new or old—run smoother and better, and costs run lower. Sells for only 25c a quart, everywhere. Better stick to "Standard."

Daylight Bandits Raid

SEATTLE, Aug. 5.—(UP)—Edward Miller, cigar clerk, walked into the Windsor card-room at the wrong time. He entered from the busy street just as two hold-up men were tying Robert Stenwick after having taken $200. They tied Miller, too, and took $80 and a diamond ring from him.

War Orphans Revolt From Roumanian Home

CLUJ, Roumania, Aug. 5.—(UP)—Three full hours were required by a combined force of police and gendarmes to quiet the inmates of the war orphanage here when the orphans "revolted" against the disciplinary measures of the institution's director.

In a body they marched out into the street to hold a public demonstration. A number of minor casualties were suffered by each side before the orphans admitted defeat and retreated to the orphanage.

Ends Her Life In Leap From Train

Former Arkansas Woman
Leaps From Train Window To Death

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., Aug. 6.—Mrs. Nola B. Bowden, 40, daughter of Mrs. Penn Saxon, of Popular Bluff and former resident of Marianna, Ark., raised a window in the wash room of a coach on Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 25 Tuesday night and leaped from the speeding train to her death. She was en route from Flint, Mich., where her husband, Frank Bowden, is employed, to visit with relatives here.

Three men at Chloride, north of here, witnessed the tragedy. They said they saw her jump from the window and fall to the ground. She was taken to a hospital, but died before arrival there. Reason for the suicide could not be established today, but it is the opinion of officers that possibly she suffered from a mental ailment. She had entered the washroom, locked the door, an hour later when the conductor opened the door he found only her vanity case, a razor blade and open window as evidence of the tragedy. Surviving are her husband and two children; her mother and stepfather, who live here.

A touch of irony was added to the incident when Cecil Saxon, half-brother of the woman arrived here last night. He was on the same train and same car with Mrs. Bowden, but did not see her. He told reporters of the incident several hours after learning that the woman was a relative.

Arrest Follows Ambush Killing

Seventeen Year Old Boy
Murdered in Lonoke County

LONOKE, Aug. 6.—Charley Morris, aged about 45, is in jail here, charged with the murder of Roy Phillips, aged 17. Young Phillips was slain from ambush as he was walking across a field near Butlerville, 10 miles north of here, about 3 Tuesday afternoon, with a companion, Hartford Harris. Morris was arrested at his home by Sheriff R. O. Benton. He offered no resistance. A gun was found on him, there were no empty shells in it. As far as could be learned Morris and Phillips were friends and had had no previous trouble. Phillips was fired on from a distance of about 50 feet. The bullet struck him in the left shoulder and came out through the breast. Harris escaped injury. A coroner's jury called late Tuesday afternoon to investigate the slaying held Morris to the action of the grand jury. He probably will be given a hearing here tomorrow.

Cotton Worm Found In North Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Cotton worms have been reported in all sections of the state according to Dwight Isely, of the University of Arkansas Extension Department today. The last sections of the state to report such infestation having come from northeast and northwest Arkansas. This report shows that the moths have covered the state said Mr. Isely. Fields should be watched closely and should it become necessary to spray the fields work should not be put off too long. No serious effects have been caused so far it is said.

To Build Own Ships

LISBON, Aug. 6.—(UP)—The government has announced that all naval construction contracts in the future will be awarded to Portuguese shipyards, thus allaying the fears of the shipbuilders that such business might go to foreign concerns. While no definite program has been made public, it is understood it is projected to soon lay the keels for two cruisers of 2,000 tons each; two gunboats of 1,000 tons each; in addition to four destroyers and two submarines.

Youth From Orphanage Gains Education While Working

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 6.—(UP)—David A. Ramsey, 16-year-old youth from the orphanage at Oxford, N. C., is earning his way through North Carolina State College here and at the same time supporting an aged grandmother and helping financially his sister who still is in the orphanage. Joseph E. Moore, director of the college self-help bureau, told the story of how Ramsey thought his college career was ended when it became necessary for him to support his grandmother. Ramsey earned $133.64 from January to June by operating the motion picture machine in the college Y. M. C. A. His grandmother received $20 each month. The student, who is studying aeronautical engineering, often walks three miles to Curtiss-Wright airport where he works as a "grease-monkey" after school hours for nothing but experience.
